

Sinclair Broadcasting is a partisan political corporation determined to use the public airways to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. This another clear example of dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair, which has become too large, is obligated by law to serve the public interest, and should not abuse the broadcasting privilege for partisan political purposes. Sinclair's actions show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.